SCENE IN THE TROPICS

'Hangover' star here for sequel

The Hangover's hilarious Zach Galifianakis had dinner at Michael's Genuine Food & Drink with a group of six Tuesday night. It wasn't his first time at the place, having dined at the bar with his assistant a few days earlier. Galifianakis, who will host SNL on March 6, isn't just lingering here from the Super Bowl. He's in town working pre-production of The Hangover 2 for the next four to six weeks. Production starts in October. At last, an actual comedy being filmed here as opposed to the comedies of errors to which we've grown so accustomed.

Demi Moore was seen shopping Saturday at Tuccia di Capri, the hand-made sandal salon off Lincoln Road, where she showed up solo. She bought three pairs and watched as the Tuccia cobblers worked.

Defeated Indianapolis Colts quarterback Peyton Manning was seen at Mr. Chow Wednesday with former Dolphins linebacker Zach Thomas and their wives.

Based on the amount of fist pumping going on at STK Miami on Monday when Jersey Shore-mates The Situation and Pauly D. showed up, we have a feeling South Beach, despite some protests like those made by Mynt owner Romain Zago, will embrace them with open fists. Our sources say the two "snapped pictures with every female that approached them."

Meanwhile there's an even bigger

South Beach connection to Jersey Shore: Former crobar doorman Doron Ofir, now a casting agent in L.A., was responsible for that, uh, original cast. He sure knows how to pick 'em.

As for that rumored house being renovated near Lincoln Road? That, we're told is for HGTV's Color Splash. In other news, although its inaugural season was not even one percent watchable, Miami Social, we hear, is not entirely dead in our waters, but if Bravo were to breathe life back into that mess, it will be with a new cast. Also rumored: more Hogans in Miami, another E! reality show, and, of course, more Kardashians, because Miami without them is like Miami without palm trees.
